Reeve to Crown

By Vaidenon of Hustan, Warden of the Inkhorn Fellowship

The offices of the Kingdom of Melderyn and the men and women who held them, from the reeve to the king, as they stood on the first of Nuzyael, 720

> "Every man in Melderyn answers to someone, and that someone answers to someone else. The art is to know which of them can help you before you need it, and which of them you will meet afterwards."

Version 1.0 · November 2026 · 4hmlb.com/library/reeve-to-crown.html · send word to vaidenon@4hmlb.com

This is a roll of who answers for what in the Kingdom of Melderyn on the first day of the year 720, from the reeve who calls the villeins to the lord's furrows to the king who hears the last appeal of every free man. I made it for travellers, for scholars and for anyone who has ever stood in a hall with a grievance and not known whose sleeve to pull.

A man's troubles begin in his village and climb. The reeve hears them first. If he cannot mend them, the lord of the manor or his bailiff will hear them at the halmote. Above the manor stand the Bailiff of the Hundred and his monthly moot, then the sheriff and his quarterly moot, and above the sheriff the king's own court. Beside this ladder stand others: the priests, who answer to their temples and their bishops; the towns, which keep their own courts under charter; and the keeps and castles, whose garrisons answer to their lords. To find your place on the roll, look up your manor in the lists of the hundreds below and read upward.

The roll is true as of the first of Nuzyael. Men die, marry, fall out of favour and are appointed in their stead, and I cannot promise that the reeve of any village is the man I name a season after you read this. Where I could find no holder of an office, I have said so. Where a post is held by a widow, a deputy or a knight in trust, I have said that too.

This roll is of Melderyn alone. Kaldor, Kanday and the other kingdoms of Hârn borrowed much of their government from her, and a reader may find the offices familiar there, but the men and women named here are Melderyn's, and I have not tried to name anyone else's.

A Warning

Every name in this roll is as it stood on the first of Nuzyael, 720. Reeves are chosen every year, bailiffs are dismissed, knights die in their beds and on the march, and sheriffs fall out of the king's favour. The offices will hold for a lifetime; the names will not. The further from that day you read this, the less you should trust any one of them.

How to Read the Roll

Who answers for what explains every office, from the least to the greatest.

The realm, the shires, the seats and the towns name the great officers.

The manors, hundred by hundred, name each manor's holder, reeve and priest.

A manor with no holder named is held directly by the lord of its seat, or by a house of a church or order.

Who Answers for What

The village

Reeve A reeve is responsible for the work of the manor: he calls the villeins to the lord's fields, keeps the tally of the harvest, the beasts and the days of labour owed, and answers to the lord or his bailiff for all of it. He is chosen from among the villeins, usually the senior man, for a year at a time, and is excused his own labour while he serves. In a quarrel between two serfs he is the first judge, and his judgement goes to the manor court if either will not take it.

Beadle A beadle is responsible for keeping the peace of the village and the lord's rights in it: he summons men to the manor court, seizes the goods of those who will not pay, guards the pound and the stocks, and watches the fields at harvest. He is a yeoman or a trusted villein, and in many villages an old soldier.

Herder A herder is responsible for the lord's and the village's beasts on the common: he takes them out, brings them home, counts them, and answers for any that stray or are lost. On the larger manors he has shepherds, cowherds and swineherds under him.

Woodward A woodward is responsible for the lord's woods: who may take timber, firewood and pannage for swine, and who may not. Where a royal forest lies near, he also keeps an eye out for the forester's men.

Parish priest A priest of Peoni keeps the village chapel, says the lay mass on the Lesser Sapelah in the early evening, blesses the fields, attends the sick and the dying, and settles quarrels that no court will. Every village of any size has one, paid by tithe and by the lord. A Laranian priest serves the castles and the great houses.

The manor

Lord of the manor (in fee) A knight who holds a manor in fee holds it of a greater lord for military service, from father to son: thirty to ninety days a year in the field, or scutage in coin instead. He keeps the manor court, takes his rents and labour, and owes his liege aids, homage and counsel. The manor is his for life and his heir's after him.

Bailiff (of a manor) A bailiff is responsible for a manor that its lord holds but does not live on, or that is held in trust: he runs it for the lord, keeps its court, collects its rents and dues, and sends the profit to his master. He serves at the lord's pleasure, and can be put out at the year's end. (Inkhorn)

Bailiff of a royal manor A bailiff of a royal manor does the same for the king: the 111 manors of the royal domain about Cherafir are each run by such a bailiff, who answers to the king's officers and not to any earl.

The manor court (halmote) The manor court sits every three weeks or so in the lord's hall. The lord or his bailiff presides; the tenants are the jury. It hears the quarrels of the villagers, fines those who break the customs of the manor, registers who holds what land, takes the heriot when a tenant dies and the merchet when his daughter marries. A serf has no appeal from it: it is his lord's court.

The hundred

Bailiff of the Hundred A Bailiff of the Hundred is responsible for the king's peace and the king's justice in a hundred, a district of some ten to twenty manors. He holds the hundred's moot manor for the sheriff, presides at the monthly hundred moot, gathers the jurors, arrests the accused, and collects the king's fines. He is a royal officer, paid 300d a month, and he can be dismissed. The hundred and the lordships do not match: a single earl's manors may lie in eight hundreds.

The hundred moot The hundred moot meets monthly at its moot manor, which usually also holds the hundred's market. Six to twelve jurors sit with the Bailiff of the Hundred. It hears felonies, breaches of the king's peace, and the pleas of free men; whether a man is serf or free is tried here, by royal writ. Appeal lies to the shire moot.

 Unofficial fan work; Hârn belongs to its publishers

Moot clerk A moot clerk keeps the rolls of the hundred moot: the cases, the jurors, the fines. He is paid 84d a month, and he usually knows more of the hundred's business than anyone.

Forester Royal A Forester Royal is responsible for the king's forest in a wild hundred: its deer, its timber and its forest law, which is harsher than the common law. His foresters arrest poachers and those who clear the king's land without leave, and bring them to the forest court. He is paid 480d a month. Some take their duties lightly; their foresters seldom do.

The seat

Tenant-in-chief An earl or a baron who holds directly of the king is a tenant-in-chief. He holds a castle or a keep and a great number of manors, some kept by his own bailiffs and the rest granted in fee to his vassal knights. He owes the king his whole levy, his counsel, and his presence at court; he keeps an honour court for his vassals' quarrels.

Constable A constable is responsible for a keep or castle that is held for another: he holds it, keeps it in repair and in arms, commands its garrison, and runs its demesne. The king's constables are paid 600d a month. Several royal keeps have their constable's office attached to the sheriff's.

Captain of the garrison A captain of the garrison commands one of the keep's guard companies of twenty: a sergeant, two corporals and sixteen men. The company keeps the walls and the gate, escorts the lord and his officers, keeps the peace of the castle town and the roads, and trains at arms in the bailey. (Inkhorn)

Sergeant and corporal A sergeant is responsible for the discipline, the watches and the training of his company; the corporals each lead a file of eight. A sergeant is the man who actually runs a garrison, whatever its captain may think.

The shire

Sheriff A sheriff is responsible for the king's government of a shire: its justice, its revenues, its castles and its peace. He holds a royal keep and its garrison for the king, presides at the quarterly shire moot, appoints and oversees the Bailiffs of the Hundreds, and sends most of what the shire yields to the Exchequer. He is paid 720d a month and may be dismissed at the king's word, which is the only thing that keeps him from being an earl.

The shire moot The shire moot meets quarterly at the sheriff's keep. It hears appeals from the hundreds, causes of free land, and the greatest crimes of the shire. From it a free man may appeal only to the king.

Warden of Dyriamarch The Warden of Dyriamarch is responsible for the march, which is no shire and has no hundreds: its defence against the Hodiri, its four companies of the Dyriamarch Guard and the earl's summer levy, and its justice, under the Earl of Elorin.

The town

Lord Warden of Cherafir The Lord Warden is the king's chief civil officer in Cherafir, the mayor in all but name: responsible for its judicial and financial matters, he appoints the aldermen and the tax officials, and the king rarely overrules him.

Lord Mayor of Thay The Lord Mayor governs the freetown of Thay with its aldermen under the town's charter from the king, and holds its military authority.

Alderman An alderman is one of the officers who govern and judge a chartered town: Thay has ten and Cherafir twelve. A townsman may bring his case to any alderman, and appeal to all of them sitting together as the town court. Many are guildmasters.

Market warden A market warden is responsible for the market: the stalls and their stallage, the weights and the measures at the beam, forestalling and short weight. On market day she judges the dealers' quarrels on the spot, at the beam, before the dealer moves on (the Terran piepowder court). (Inkhorn)

Guildmaster A guildmaster leads a guild's chapter in a town: its masters, its prices and its quality, its quarrels with other guilds, and its seat on the council. The guilds together answer to the Mangai.

Harbormaster A harbormaster is responsible for a port: its pilots, its moorings, its dues, and the order of the ships in it. Most are of the Pilots' Guild.

The churches

Pelnala and Serolan A Pelnala heads a temple or a house of the Church of Peoni; a Serolan a temple or abbey of the Church of Larani. Each answers for its clergy, its lands, its alms and its school.

Bishop (Rekela, Sulaplyn) A bishop oversees the temples and clergy of a region: the Laranian Rekelae of Melderyn and of Eloria, the Peonian Sulaplyn. Church courts judge clergy and causes of faith, marriage and oaths.

Primate and Serekela A primate leads his church in all Hârn; the Laranian and Peonian primates both sit at Thay. The Serekela is the archbishop of Melderyn.

The realm

The King The King of Melderyn is the lord of all the land and the last court of every free man. He holds the royal domain about Cherafir himself, appoints the sheriffs, the constables and the Bailiffs of the Hundreds, and his court (the curia regis) sits where he is.

The Council of Eleven The Council of Eleven advises the king. Its members are the realm's greatest scholars and mages; the king listens, and is wise to.

The Royal Guard The Royal Guard is Melderyn's only standing force: three companies of knights-bachelor (the High Guard) and eight of elite men-at-arms (the Low Guard), under the Marshal of the Royal Guard. It travels with the king, save the two Low Guard companies that stay at Cherafir.

The Chancellor and the Exchequer The Chancellor keeps the king's seal and his justice: the sheriffs answer to him for their courts. The Exchequer keeps the king's money: the sheriffs answer to it for their revenues. The holders are not named here.

The Shires

Six shires and one march. Each sheriff holds a royal keep for the king, keeps the king's peace and gathers his revenue, and holds the shire moot four times a year. Dyriamarch, on the frontier, has no shire and no hundreds; its warden answers to the Earl of Elorin.

| Shire | Seat | Sheriff (or warden) | Hundreds |
|---|---|---|---|
| Birenshire | Racyn | Brynet Mery | 6 |
| Cherfinshire | Shenap | Sir Clyve Lydel | 10 |
| Dathshire | Jetust | Sir Remond Symosen | 17 |

| Ikoshire | Chyrefal | Sir Balsen Torele | 4 |
| Lenedshire | Cupeth | Jenis Thabel | 10 |

The Hundreds

The Bailiff of the Hundred holds the moot each month at the moot manor, keeps the king's peace on the roads and in the villages, and answers to the sheriff. In a wild hundred a Forester Royal keeps the king's forest and its deer.

The Manors, Hundred by Hundred

Every manor of the kingdom with its holder, its reeve and its priest. The holder is the knight who holds it in fee, the bailiff who keeps it for an absent lord or for the king, or the lord of a seat who keeps it in his own hand.
